LEADERS OF THEIR SEX.

Triennial Session of the National Council of Women.

The Leaders of Their Various Associations Meet to Discuss Topics of Interest to Their Sex.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—The formal opening of the second triennial session of the national council of women of the United States began at the Metropolis hotel today, Mrs May Wright Sewall, its president, calling the meeting to order. The council is a representative body composed of delegates from all various associations of women throughout the country. The council will hold three sessions daily for the next two weeks.

The following are the permanent officers: May Wright Sewall, president; Mary F. Eastman, honorary vice president; Frances E Bagley, vice president; Rachael Foster Avery, corresponding secretary; Lillian M. N. Stevens, treasurer, and Isabelle Charles Davis, recording secretary.

Introductory religious services, conducted by Rev. Annie Ford Eastman and Rev. Anna Howard Shaw, were held yesterday afternoon, while nearly all the leaders of the council preached or lectured in the various city churches last night.

Among the twenty associations represented are the Woman Suffragists, the W. C. T. U., Universal Peace union, Kindergarten union, various social, relief and missionary societies, the Woman Douglis, Women Stenographers, National Council of Jewish Women, American Anti-Vivisection society and various local councils of women.

Seated on the platform and included among those in the audience were Susan B. Anthony, Frances E Willard, Sarah F. Hoffman, Margaret Isabel Sandes, J. Ellen Foster, Rachel Foster Avery and Harriet T. Upton. There are also present a number of foreign delegates from organizations not in the council and most of the time of the opening session was occupied in hearing greetings from those organizations. These included the following:

Legion of Loyal Women, Ellen Spencer Mussey, of this city.

Woman's First Dental association, Dr. Edith Jewell, of this city.

Woman's Foreign Missionary society of the M. E church, Mrs. A. H. Eaton, of Maryland.

Women's National Indian association, Amelia S Quinton, New Jersey.

National Household Economic association, Dr. Mary E Green, Michigan.

Christian Woman's Board of Missions, Clara E Schell, of the District of Columbia.

General Grand Chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star, Mary C. Snedden, Missouri.

General Spinner Memorial association, Harriet N. Ralston, District of Columbia.

National Women's Auxilary to the Kelley League, Ida Buxton Cole, Pennsylvania.

National League of Colored Women, (represented by fifteen delegates.) Helen A. Cook, chairman.

Ladies of the Maccabees of the World, Bina M. West, Michigan.

Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic, Nettie E. Gunlock, Illinois.

Pacific Coast Woman's Press association, Sarah E Reamer, California.

Kings' Daughters, Mary Lowe Dickinson, New York, and others.

Representatives from the National Council of Women of Canada were also in attendance and occupied seats on the platform. The tri-ennial address of May Wright Sewall, of Indiana, the president of the council, concluded the morning session.

AMERICAN WHEELMEN

Holding Their Annual Convention in New York City.

NEW YORK, Feb 18.—The annual convention of the League of American Wheelmen began this morning at the Grand Union hotel, in this city, with an attendance of bicycle enthusiasts from all the states from Maine to California. The primary object of the convention is to discuss several important changes in the laws of the league and the selection of a place for the next annual meeting. It is probable that the question of whether or not the color line will be drawn in the league will come up during the present session and there is also likely to be some fight as to where the next annual meet of the league is to be held. There are two parties, the Boston and Asbury Park, and both maintain that it would be best for the league to hold its meet on their respective tracks.

Irwin Not Guilty.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 18.—The sealed verdict in the case against George M. Irwin, for false pretense, was opened in court this morning. It found the discretionary pool operator not guilty of the offense charged but ordered him to pay the costs of the case. There are several other charges hanging over Mr. Irwin's head, but it is not known whether the failure to convict him on the false pretense charge, will cause the other cases to be abandoned. Mr. Irwin says that he will give up the blind pool operation but will continue speculation for himself and his friends.

Missing Steamer.

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—The French line steamer LaBourgione from Havre February 9, was due yesterday morning. She had not been reported at 9.30 this morning, but there is no anxiety in consequence of her non arrival. When she left Havre, La Gascogne was then nearly a week overdue here and the probability is that Captain Golfray of La Bourgione, was instructed to keep a good watch for the missing steamer. This being the case he would, no doubt, take a zig zag course in the hope of sighting the LaGascogne and thus lose considerable time in reaching port.

GOVERNOR'S DEMAND

For an Immediate Investigation of Superintendent Johnson.

The Senate Votes Down the Resolution to Take the Investigation Out of Its Hands.

INDIANAPOLIS, Feb 18.—At 3 o'clock this afternoon Governor Matthews sent a message to the senate demanding full and immediate hearing of the charges preferred against Alexander Johnson, superintendent of the School for Feeble Minded Youth, at Fort Wayne.

The senate voted down the resolution to take the investigation out of its hands.

MAGNATES MEET.

Prominent Officers of the Harrison Telephone Co. Here.

They Hold a Conference With the Members of the Old District Telegraph Co.—Further Plans.

An important meeting of the new local telephone company was held this morning at the electric light works. Messrs. Breen, Gilmartin, R. T. Mc Donald and others of the old District Telegraph company met with representatives of the Harrison company for the purpose of electing a set of officers and talking over plans for immediately pushing the work of building the new system.

The representatives of the Harrison company present were:

E. G. Leszynsky, secretary and general manager of the western branch of the Harrison company.

E. H. Andress, of Lafayette, local manager of the Harrison company at that place.

Geo. P. Haywood, vice-president of the Lafayette company.

J. B Stearns, superintendent of construction for the Harrison company.

I. N. Wood, of Fort Wayne, who will have charge of the system at this point.

Mr. Wood was seen at the Wayne club at noon and stated that the new company would begin within a week or two to put in their poles and string their wires and that by the first or middle of May the people could expect to see the new exchange in perfect working order.

The three leading officers chosen were:

President—Geo. P. Haywood.
Vice-President—E G. Leszynsky.
Treasurer—Wm. P. Breen.

A HOSPITAL FIRE.

Thirty Patients Barely Escape With Their Lives.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Feb. 18.—Fire broke out in the Asbury hospital, a Methodist institution, today. There were about thirty patients in it at the time and all were safely removed to St. Barnabas hospital just across the street. The force of laundresses and nurses on the top floor were rescued with difficulty.

The flames were extinguished before the building had been seriously damaged. Serious results for some of the patients are feared.

A Bad Fire.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Feb. 18.—The north wing of Music hall was damaged by fire today to the extent of about $50,000. The rooms occupied by the Saengerbund society were gutted; the library of the German Young Men's association, which owns the structure, was damaged by smoke and fire, and the concert hall was soaked with water. The total loss will reach $75,000. The cause of the fire is thought to have been escaping gas.

Tourist Killed.

GUADALAJARA, Mex., Feb. 18.—George Martin and Frank Gardner, two American tourists, left here about a month ago for Mazatlan. Advices have just been received that Gardner was thrown from his horse near Tepic and killed. He is said to have been a prominent and wealthy business man of some city in New York state.

THE LEGISLATURE.

The House Legalizes Voting by Machinery.

The Proposition to Raise $150,000 for University Purposes is Up in the Senate—The Nicholson Bill.

INDIANAPOLIS, Feb. 18.—The house has passed a resolution for voting by machinery. Also a resolution that a man must be fully naturalized and have lived in the United States five years before he can vote in Indiana.

The bill to raise by taxes about $150,000 for the Indiana University, Purdue and State Normal school came up in the senate this morning, but consideration of it was postponed until this afternoon. Senators Lafollette and Shively say the amount of the donation is entirely too large and they will offer an amendment.

The placing of the Nicholson temperance bill on the house calendar as the special order for tomorrow morning will bring before the body at that time by far the most interesting measure of the session, for legislative action on no measure within the present decade has excited as much popular interest, nor will the attitude of the members toward any other be so closely scrutinized as on that. It is already a foregone conclusion that the bill will pass the house, and it will not occasion any surprise if it receives a two-thirds majority, for in every county whose representative was thought to be opposed to the bill petitions have been circulated asking him to support it, and this pressure has been so strong that few will have the hardihood to resist it. It now seems probable that the only opposition to the bill will come from the representatives of counties containing large cities and in which the liquor element has considerable influence. There is a probability that petitions will reach the senate this week against the passage of the bill and the majority in the body will seek from these a reason for materially amending the measure, if not defeating altogether, for it is notorious that the republican managers are opposed to it and would like to see it defeated.

The fact that but three weeks of the session now remain for the accomplishment of the legislation suggested in more than 500 bills has induced the majority to hold night sessions, and these will be entered tomorrow evening. Though several measures have been passed by the house, there have not been a dozen bills enacted into laws in the five weeks since the body first convened, and the leaders in the house have reached the conclusion that if anything is to be accomplished, it can only be done by adding another session each day. Ordinarily night sessions have not been held except on the three days immediately preceding the close of the session, but a legislature with a two-thirds republican majority has found it impossible to advance legislation except by this extraordinary means.

In referring to dispatches sent out that he had been offered the Mexican mission, Governor Matthews said: "The story is without foundation. I am not, have not been and will not be an applicant for the appointment. No messages have passed between the president and myself concerning the matter. I was elected to serve as governor, and, if life be spared me, I hope to fill the office to the end of my term. I believe that Mr. Gray's successor should be conceded to Indiana," and I hope the president may appoint some good man."

MINISTER GRAY'S FUNERAL.

Indiana Officials Preparing to Show Fitting Marks of Respect.

INDIANAPOLIS, Feb. 18.—A committee representing Indianapolis and Union City, headed by Governor Claud Matthews, had a conference yesterday with Pierre Gray, looking to paying fitting honors to the remains of Minister Gray. Partial arrangements were effected, conditional upon the consent of Mrs. Gray thereto. The body is expected to arrive here Thursday at 3 o'clock p. m. It will be met by the governor and state officers, the mayor and military, and will be transferred to the capitol, where the body will lie in state until 8 o'clock p. m. A military guard will be in charge.

At 8 o'clock Friday morning a special train conveying the remains with friends, which will include the governor and chief dignitaries of the state, will leave for Union City, arriving at 11 o'clock a. m., where the body will be transferred to the committee representing Governor Gray's old home. The body will then lie in state until 3 o'clock p. m., when the final interment will be had, conducted by Dr. McDonald, of the Presbyterian church. President Ingalls has tendered the use of his private car from St. Louis to Union City, in recognition of his life-long friendship for the late Governor Gray. A committee representing Governor Matthews will meet the remains at the Indiana state line.

RECEIVED A LIFE SENTENCE.

Has Been Twice Convicted of Murder—Verdict Favorably Received.

FRANKLIN, Ind., Feb. 18.—The Brown murder trial came to an end Saturday night by the jury returning a verdict of guilty and sentencing the prisoner to state prison for life. The case was brought to Johnson county on a change of venue from Bartholomew, where the prisoner was sentenced to be hanged. The crime for which the prisoner was tried was the killing of his wife in the steam barge Homestead, five miles north of Columbus, on the afternoon of August [illegible]. The defense was made wholly on the ground of insanity, and quite a number of witnesses were summoned to substantiate the claim, but the verdict goes to show that the efforts made to convince the jury of the prisoner's insanity was a failure. The verdict meets the approval of the general public.

JACKSON ARRESTED.

Gus Is Accused of Insulting John Anderson.

He Called His Enemy Some Unrespectable Names and Anderson Retaliates—Other Notes.

About noon today Gus Jackson, the saloonkeeper, was arrested upon an affidavit of John Anderson, charging him with insulting and provoking the plaintiff on Calhoun street, yesterday afternoon. Anderson states that as the funeral of the late Maurice Cody was passing down the street he and his wife and little child were standing at the corner of Calhoun and Wayne streets. Jackson came out of his restaurant and walking up to where Anderson was talking to Policeman Albert Foulks began to heap abuse upon Anderson's head. He called the gentleman a cowardly "thing" and said that his wife ought to be ashamed to be seen upon the streets with such a "specimen of humanity." In fact, according to Andersons' statement, Jackson insulted him in a shameful manner.

Anderson, it will be remembered, was the man who recently swore out an affidavit charging Jackson with selling liquor after 11 o'clock.

This morning Anderson swore out another affidavit charging Jackson with provoke, and he was arrested as stated.

This afternoon Jackson was taken before 'Squire Huser and fined $1 and costs. He gave notice of appeal.

COLORED MAN ARRESTED.

Yesterday Superintendent Liggett received a dispatch from Chief Haller, of Lima, Ohio, asking the Fort Wayne police to arrest C. C. Powell, a colored porter. Lieutenant Lapp started out to hunt the fellow and finally located him in the alley south of the Wayne hotel. He was placed under arrest and taken to the police station. The man pretended to be surprised at his arrest and asserted that he knew no reason why he should be wanted by the Lima officials. Chief Haller was notified of the arrest and later telegraphed to learn whether Powell would return to Ohio without a requisition. He agreed to go and Superintendent Liggett so notified the Lima chief. This noon Chief Haller arrived in Fort Wayne for his man. He stated that Powell was wanted for larceny of several dollars.

LOCKED IN.

It is related of three Fort Wayne luminaries, who are lobying against the Nicholson bill at Indianapolis, that the other night they were in an Indianapolis saloon when the hour of 11 o'clock came around. In fact they stayed a trifle longer than 11 o'clock and when they got ready to leave the place found three burly policemen waiting to nab them up. They were kept prisoners in the saloon for four hours and finally escaped by a subterranean passage.

Serious Wreck.

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., Feb. 18.—A serious wreck occurred on the Norfolk and Western railroad at 1 o'clock this morning, seven miles west of this city. Train No. 2 south bound, was running at a rate of thirty-five miles an hour when the engine jumped the track followed by two coaches. John Adkins, of Wayne county, was killed outright; an unknown lady from Petoskey, Mich., was struck on the head and is dying, and Engineer Jackson and Fireman Gayes were seriously hurt. The track is torn up badly and traffic impeded.

LINCOLN'S RELIGION.

A Tribute to the Faith of Our Martyred President.

Pastor Northrop Preaches an Eloquent Sermon at the Baptist Tabernacle—Lincoln a True Christian.

At the Baptist Tabernacle last evening Rev Stephen A Northrop preached an interesting sermon, taking as his leading theme the religion of that great and good man, our martyred president, Abraham Lincoln.

The Tabernacle was filled almost to overflowing and after appropriate introductory services Pastor Northrop announced his text from the eighth chapter of Acts. After touching upon the gospel and drawing a strong parallel to the character of Lincoln the speaker said, in part:

"All confessions of faith are short. It only requires a few words for a man to give testimony to his belief in the divinity of Christ and the general plan of salvation set forth in that great book of books, the Bible. So is it equally true that all great men, who have given testimony of God, have done so in terse, concise statements which cover a world of belief and are sweeping in their assertion of the everlasting truth.

Abraham Lincoln was the son of poor but noble parents. His mother was a woman highly gifted in practical knowledge and the finer feelings of womanhood. Baptist by belief she found in the depths of the Illinois woods the Christian's true solace in the Bible. At the age of nine years she thoroughly instilled into the mind of her son the love of God and the beliefs of a true Christian.

Not long afterward Mrs. Lincoln died and, sad as it may seem, there was no minister of the gospel present to say a farewell word to the Christian soul which had passed into the beyond, or breathe a prayer over the lonely grave in the depth of the forest. This was due to the fact that it was impossible in that day to secure a minister in that remote district. Little Abraham was touched to the quick and, boy that he was, he wrote a pathetic note to a minister in the nearest village imploring him that when he came to the region of the Lincoln's home he would stop and say a few words over the grave of the loving mother whom the son mourned as only a sensitive, tender spirit could.

"Infidels boast that there was a time in Lincoln's life when he was an atheist. This is true. There are times in the lives of most of us when the sun is obscured by the veil of clouds and when we go groping about in blind dispair. But our martyred president soon found the true light and he followed it ever afterwards until the cowardly ball of the assassin laid him low.

In acknowledgment of an elegant Bible presented by a committee of colored people from Baltimore, September 5th, 1864, Mr Lincoln said: "In regard to this great book I have only to say that it is the best gift God ever gave to man. All the good from the Saviour of the world is communicated through this book. But for this book we could not know right from wrong. All those things desirable for man are contained in it. The character of the Bible is easily established, at least to my satisfaction. We have to believe many things which we do not comprehend. The Bible is the only history that claims to be God's book—to comprise His laws, His history. It contains an immense amount of evidence as to its authenticity. Now let us treat the Bible fairly. If we had a witness on the stand whose general story was true, we would believe him even when he asserted the facts of which we have no other evidence. We ought to treat the Bible with equal fairness. I decided long ago that it was less difficult to believe that the Bible was what it claimed to be than to disbelieve it."

Throughout the whole period of the war, he, Mr. Lincoln, constantly directed the attention of the nation to dependence on God. It may, indeed, be doubted whether he omitted this in a single state paper. At another time he said: "Douglas don't care whether slavery is voted up or down, but God cares, and humanity cares, and I care and with God's help I shall not fail. If I can learn God's will, I will do it, if it is probable that he would reveal to others, it may be supposed that He would reveal it to me. What ever shall appear to be God's will, I will do."

"It is related of Lincoln that before every great battle of the rebellion he went alone to his chamber in the white house and there through the long hours of the night prayed for the deliverance of the nation. What cause could fail with such a true christian leader?"

ANOTHER BLACK EYE

Received by the Obscene Kansas City Sunday Sun.

Saturday evening "Reddy" O'Conner appeared on the street with several hundred copies of the Kansas City Sun. O'Conner had not proceeded far when Constable Johnson arrested him on a warrant sworn out by Deputy Prosecuting Attorney Ryan on the charge of selling obscene literature. At Justice Bohen's office H. L. Strobm, attorney for the Sun, appeared for O'Conner. Justice Bohen continued the case until Tuesday afternoon. Bond for $100 was furnished with Mr. Fred Meyer, the saloonkeeper, as surety. The proprietors of the Sun are making a desperate and determined effort to continue the sale of their paper in this city and Prosecuting Attorney Colerick is just as determined that it shall be suppressed. The sheet was driven out of Kansas City by the authorities a few years ago and its proprietors went to Chicago where it was printed.

After the suit O'Connor, acting on the instruction of Attorney Strohm, sold some copies of the paper and Justice Bohen put a stop to it, at the same time giving Strohm a lecture for having violated his promise that he made not to attempt to sell any more copies of the paper until the case was finally adjudicated.

ENTIRELY DESTROYED.

The Home of Farmer Federspiel Burns Down.

Only a Portion of the Furniture Was Saved—Mrs. Hattersley Breaks a Limb.

A large farm house of P. B. Federspiel, a well known Allen county farmer living east of this city about sixteen miles, caught fire yesterday and burned to the ground in a very few moments. The fire is supposed to have originated from a defective flue and the entire upper story was on fire before the family were aware of the fact. Only a small amount of furniture was saved, and this with great difficulty. The loss to the building and furniture will reach $1,000 and is covered by $650 insurance in the F. X. Schuler agency.

OTHER CASUALTIES.

Mrs. Ivy, mother of the late A. K. Ivy, fell down stairs last evening at the residence of her daughter-in-law, and sustained a fracture of the arm. Dr. A. J. Boswell reduced the fracture.

Annie, the eight-year-old daughter of Adolf Ripkey, of 62 Walton avenue, fell on the ice yesterday and fractured her collar bone.

MRS. HATTERSLEY INJURED.

Mrs. Alfred Hattersley was seriously injured Saturday night by falling on the curb of the pavement near her home, 178 West Wayne street. Mrs. Hattersley was alighting from a carriage when she slipped and in the fall her leg was fractured badly. She was carried into the house and made as comfortable as possible.

NEARLY SUFFOCATED.

The family of Dr. Holloway, on South Calhoun street, were nearly suffocated by gas, on Saturday afternoon. Dr. Harrod was called and it was some time before all were out of danger.

CUT HIS EYE.

A young man named Caudry, who drives a delivery for J. H. Hartman, while skating at the reservoir yesterday, fell and cut a deep gash over his eye.

CARRIES DEATH WITH IT

The Effect of Alcohol Upon the Human System.

Discourse of Dr. C. A. Dorman, the Physician Evangelist, Upon This Theme at the City Y. M. C. A.

Faced by an audience of men which crowded the City Y. M. C. A. hall to the doors, Dr C. A. Dorman, the physician evangelist, delivered a lecture yesterday afternoon on "The Effects of Alcohol on the Human Body." It was a most magnificent, entertaining and instructive presentation of the subject from a scientific standpoint and carried with its delivery a warning that should be heeded by every young man.

Drunkenness, he said was both a sin and a disease. It is at first a sin and then when the habit becomes fixed it is a disease that the victim finds himself almost unable to get rid of. Its ruinous nature is sending thousands to an early grave every year and it is the duty of all to do their uttermost to check the blighting, deadly curse and this he believed could be done to a great extent by impressing upon the minds of the youth of our land the evil effects of alcohol upon the human system. He thought it ought to be taught in the public schools.

Alcohol, he said, was the active agent in every intoxicating drink and it was one of the deadliest poisons that a man could take into his stomach. Instead of its being a stimulant, as so many contend, it is an irritant and a narcotic and deadens the sensibilities of every organ of the body with which it comes in contact. It is not one of the good things of God. It is a curse and an unmitigated evil, destructive alike of both animal and vegetable life. He did not believe that when God created the world that there was a pint of alcohol brought into existence. It was the creation of man and is made from decayed vegitable matter, which of itself ought to be enough to condemn it.

The doctor showed at some length by experiments and charts the ruinous effects that alcohol had upon the brain, the nerves, and the linings of the stomach. It deadened sensabilities, made the stomach full of sores and cancers and led to sure and certain death long before the victim had reached his allotted term of years.

As illustrative of the deadly effects of alcohol he said one could take a leech, which has wonderful vitality, and cut it into a half dozen parts and yet each part will retain its life and serve as a blood absorber for twenty-four hours after it has thus been cut in parts. If, however, this leech or any of these pieces should be put into a glass of alcohol they would die in less than 20 minutes. And this alcohol is the sort of stuff that thousands of men are taking into their stomachs every day. Its action on the organs of the stomach may be slower than it is on the leech, but it will bring no less certain death.

As proof against alcohol being an aid for digestion, the doctor took three raw eggs and poured upon them some alcohol. In a few moments the eggs were made as stiff as batter, instead of being digested as it is claimed is the action of alcohol on the food in the stomach. This, said the doctor, holding up the glass after the hardening process had taken place, is the condition of the high-toned drinks, "Tom and Jerry" and eggnog, not very long after they have got into the stomach of the drinking man. Alcohol turns the food from its intended purpose, ties it up into a stony hardness and prevents it from giving the proper nutrition to the various organs of the human body.

The old idea that men ought to take a little wine "for his stomach's sake" was long since exploded, as it had been proven that there was no more dangerous element that could be taken into the stomach than alcohol, which when its use has once been commenced has to be continued and constantly increased if the same effects are produced and at last leads to a stagnation of action on the part of every organ and adds dead tissues and dead matter to the human system.

Dr. Dorman did not believe that the use of alcohol or alcoholic drinks, even as a medicine, ought to be sanctioned by physicians. All that could be claimed for it was that it was a stimulant and the leaders in medical science had long since condemned it for that purpose, because they have found better remedies.

His lecture throughout was a most interesting one and clearly proved the evil effects that alcohol had upon the human system. Dr. Dorman is one of the leading physicians of the country, but during the last few years, he has, to save the youth from the sins that confront them, entered the lecture field and he is now speaking in all the large cities upon temperance, secret sins of men and kindred topics from a medical standpoint, and doing great good wherever he goes. He will, by request, repeat his lecture, "Secret Sins" at the City Y. M. C. A. next Thursday evening.

TEACHERS' MEETING

Held by the Teachers of Wayne and Washington Townships.

Last Saturday afternoon the teachers' institute of Wayne and Washington townships was held in the rooms of the Fort Wayne Business college. Miss Alice Jones presided at the meeting. The program consisted of ten numbers and was as follows:

"Royal Government of Virginia," Mr. Kinnick; "Veins of Wealth," Mr. Chenoweth; "A Morning Lesson for Advanced Pupils," Miss Meyer; [illegible] Miss Jones; "Fourth Year," Miss Pratt; "Fourth Year," Miss O'Rourke; "Method," Miss Winters; "Arithmetic," Miss Leonard, "Ruskin's Essay," Miss Miller; "Reading," Miss Graham.

It was decided to hold the next institute on March 23, 1895.

DIED VERY SUDDENLY.

Mrs. Theresa Hartman Succumbs to Heart Disease.

Demise of Julius A. Knothe, a Well Known Pioneer German Settler—Other Deaths and Funerals.

Last night at 11 o'clock Mrs. Theresa Hartman, of 311 East Wayne street, died very suddenly of heart failure. She had been ailing for some time, but her death was not expected so suddenly. She ate her supper as usual and seemed to be in good spirits, but the angel of death soon came to call her to her last home, and to those who had gone before. Mrs. Hartman was a most amiable and generous hearted lady, in all her works and deeds ever remembering the poor. She leaves a family of grown children, Mrs. John Schele, of East Wayne street; Joe and Henry, of the firm of Hartman Bros., and John, of Miller & Hartman, besides a number of grand children. Mrs. Hartman was born sixty six years ago last December in Westphalia, Germany. She has been a member of St. Mary's church since she came to this city and her funeral will, in all probability, be held Wednesday at 9 o'clock.

KNOTHE.

Saturday night, at his home, corner of Liberty and Canal streets, occurred the death of Julius A. Knothe, an old and highly respected German citizen of Fort Wayne. The deceased was born in Gorlitz, Germany, and was seventy-eight years of age at the time of his death. He was a cabinetmaker and carpenter by trade. He leaves a son, Charles, and two daughters, Mrs. Paul Wolf and Mrs. Wm. Piepenbrink, of South Bend. The funeral will occur Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the residence of Councilman Paul Wolf, and at 2:30 from the St. Paul Lutheran church.

MILLER.

The four days'-old child of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Miller, of Marion township, died Sunday of exhaustion. The funeral was held today from the residence of the parents.

FRANCIS.

Earl Wayne Francis, aged fourteen, died at the school for feeble minded youth yesterday. The cause of death was heart disease. The funeral was held this morning at the school.

THOMPSON.

Elizabeth B. Thompson, a two weeks old child, died at its parents' home, three miles west of the city. The cause of death was bronchitis.

FUNERAL OF MAURICE CODY.

The funeral of the late Maurice Cody occurred yesterday afternoon from the Cathedral, under the auspices of the Ancient Order of Hibernians. The funeral was largely attended, the City band heading the cortege to the grave. The city council attended in a body and furnished a beautiful floral tribute.

RECEIVER NAMED.

A. A. Purman Appointed for Leikauf Bros. & Bash.

Trouble Between the Partners Leads to An Arrest and a Damage Suit for False Imprisonment.

This morning, in the circuit court, an application was made for a receiver to manage the business of Leikauf Bros. & Bash, the pork packing house firm, and Judge O'Rourke appointed Attorney A. A. Purman to that position, who immediately entered upon the performance of his duties. The firm consists of John and Frank Leikauf and W. B. Bash, each being equal partners, and the above state of affairs was brought about on account of difficulties between the partners.

There was also filed in the circuit court this morning a suit brought by Frank Leikauf, through his attorneys, Colerick & France against Willis Bash and Police Sergeant Frank Jewell to recover $5,000 for the false imprisonment of the plaintiff.

Yesterday afternoon Mr. Bash undertook to move a number of barrels of meat from the establishment for the purpose, so it is alleged, of securing possession of it. Frank Leikauf and his brother interfered and Mr. Bash telephoned for the police. Sergeant Jewell went out in the patrol wagon and when he arrived Mr. Bash ordered him to arrest Leikauf. The latter gentleman insisted on Bash being arrested also, but the officer didn't see it that way, and took Leikauf to the police station.

No charge was filed against him and he was not locked up. Presently Henry Colerick, his attorney, arrived and demanded his client's release. A messenger was sent to Superintendent Liggett's residence and returned with orders to release Leikauf, and he was allowed to depart with his attorney.

The suits commenced in the courts today are the result of yesterday's trouble and the estrangement that has existed between the parties for some time.

A BOSTON GIRL'S LIFE

Saved from Pain and Despair by the Timely Aid of a Noted Woman.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

IS there anything more truly pathetic than the [illegible] of a young girl [illegible] future and cheerfulness? [illegible] that joy and gladness that should fill her young heart, pours forth when she realizes that her dreaded enemy, [illegible] the [illegible],—banished forever.

This sunshine and joy is now the happy portion of Miss Florence —— of Beacon Street, Boston.

She often tells of her suffering from the suppression of the menses. The pain was excruciating. The doctors, instead of removing the cause of her ailment, piled her with [illegible] to prevent convulsions, but the trouble was permitted to exist.

When she could endure no more, prostration was imminent and future hopeless,—her family procured a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which, superior to all, rapidly and permanently cured her.

In writing to Mrs. Pinkham, pouring forth her gratitude and happiness, she says, "Oh! that I could make every suffering woman try your valuable medicine! How they would bless you!"

GEORGE B. SWIFT will probably be nominated for mayor by the republican convention next Thursday, at Chicago. Judge Payne is in the lead for the democratic nomination.

JUDGING from an article published in the Cincinnati Enquirer it looks very much as if Governor Matthews would receive the appointment as minister to Mexico, made vacant by the death of ex-Governor Gray. In this case Mortimer J. Nye, at present lieutenant governor, would become governor.

THE "Medical Age" gives the following statistics as a fairly accurate estimate of the various causes of death throughout the world. The highest average falls to scarlet fever, to which 48,000 deaths are attributed; 30,000 to typhoid and typhus fever; 27,000 to apoplexy; 25,000 to whooping cough; 18,100 to measles; 7,500 to consumption; 7,000 to erysipelas; 7,000 to rheumatism; 1,200 to gout, and 900 to senility.

CHAIRMAN WILSON, of the ways and means committee, has been suggested as a proper person to succeed the late Isaac P. Gray as minister to Mexico. If Mr. Wilson desires this appointment it may come to him without any solicitation other than the mere expression of his wish in the matter. His qualifications for the post are ample. No democrat has labored more faithfully than he for the highest good of his party. His broken health is an eloquent testimonial to his faithful and patriotic service.

THAT there is a conspiracy in existence to make money out of the condition of the treasury is believed by many men in both branches of congress. Naturally members of the administration will not express their belief upon such a matter. The idea of the conspirators, as understood by those who believe in their existence, is to withdraw gold from the treasury and hoard it until gold can by its scarcity be forced to a premium. It is known to a certainty that the legitimate demand for gold—to pay debts and for purchases in Europe—could have been met with less than one-half of the gold that has been recently withdrawn from the treasury. It is perfectly clear then that more than one-half of the gold withdrawn is now hoarded in the vaults of banks and safe deposit companies. Why? It can earn nothing for its owners while thus lying idle and the men who are credited with doing the hoarding are men who always expect a profit out of all of their financial transactions. There is only one way they can make a profit out of this one and that is to force gold to a premium. That's why so many believe they are doing that very thing, or at least trying to do it.

A POLL of the New York legislature shows Mr. Reed well in the lead as the members' choice for president, but McKinley is a strong second, while Harrison is a very bad third. It is curious to note that out of 115 expressed preferences Governor Morton has only four supporters. With the convention a little more than a year off, Governor McKinley appears to be holding his own, and, it is doubtless his policy to rest on the laurels of last fall's victory and let Mr. Reed and other rivals hang themselves on the financial question.

THE present congress will die, by virtue of the laws of the United States, on the fourth of March. But eleven more working days of the session therefore remain and from this time forward it is probable there will be nothing more than the appropriation bills considered. During the whole session congress has done but little to relieve the business and industrial embarrassment of the country. It failed to come up to the necessities of the hour, as it should have done, and there will not be many tears shed when it passes out of existence.

IN THE manufacturing district which centers around the crossing of Market and Adams streets, at Chicago, a condition has recently developed that is puzzling many firms for an explanation. On every hand can be seen signs in the windows of wholesale houses indicating that female help is wanted. Advertisements appear daily in the newspapers, offering good wages to women and girls who will work in the clothing manufactories. Some firms have even advanced wages to secure the help needed. This condition of things has prevailed for more than a month, and is apparently likely to continue for an indefinite period.

What Are We Coming To?

Senator Morgan of Alabama has prepared a bill for the reconstruction of the United States consular service. It is a severe blow, this bill, to the good old doctrine that a public office is a private snap. Senator Morgan actually proposes that our consuls shall be put through an examination for all the world like college students or letter carriers. He thinks that the time has come when the United States consular service will have to make a strenuous effort, and that a steady one, not to be outdone by the consular service of other nations and not to show off shamefully and scandalously in comparison with that. Our commercial interests demand this, and we shall be criminally negligent unless we attend to it.

Meantime the branches in which the candidate will have to pass examination, if the Morgan bill becomes a law, are first of all the common school studies. The embryo foreign consul must even know the constitution of the United States, and besides that must actually understand how to spell at sight. As if this were not tyrannical enough, he must be between the ages of 21 and 45 and must be familiar with the history of all the world's most important treaties "from the peace of Westphalia to the present time." That is tough. Can no old political heeler who has been voting the boys straight for 40 years any longer get the small recognition of a foreign consulship? What are we coming to?

The last indignity, however, the feather that breaks the camel's back, so to speak, will be the requirement that a candidate for consul must know at least one foreign language and pass examination therein. If the day has come when an appointee to a foreign consulship must actually be required to understand the language of the land he is going to transact business in, then indeed it is time to quit.

What England Would Like In China.

In The Cosmopolitan, Lord Wolseley says that unless China can at once organize an efficient army of 100,000 men "under English or other foreign officers she ought by June next to be under the heel of her present invader." He wants, does Wolseley, an Englishman to jump in right quick and save China. It must be an Englishman because "we seem to have greater aptitude for that sort of thing than gentlemen of other nationalities." Dear, dear, how modest! But Englishmen are nothing if not modest.

Wolseley points with pride to how Englishmen saved Egypt and concludes that they could "save" China in a similar manner. Just so. But heaven save the saving.

One would think that England's course in Egypt would scarcely be a chapter which Englishmen would be proud of. Her rule is an iron yoke, from which the young khedive has tried, and tried in vain, to free his neck. He will never do it. When England sets her good sized foot down upon a weak nation, she sets it to stay. Look at India. Look at Matabeleland in Africa. As India, Egypt and South Africa now are, so China will be once she lets Englishmen officer her army and fight the Japs for a consideration. Wolseley speaks out the desire of every one of his fellow countrymen when he recommends China to reorganize her army and officer it by Englishmen. Then she would whip Japan, he says. No doubt. But better trust to the tender mercies of Japan than do that. China's last estate under the benevolent oversight of Great Britain would be worse than her first.

One likes that—the recommendation of the American congress to Great Britain to arbitrate the British Guiana boundary line dispute with Venezuela. It sounds as though the United States were getting to be one of "the powers."

Three weeks after the new diphtheria remedy, antitoxine, was introduced into New York city deaths from that disease had fallen off 25 per cent.

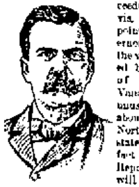
PRITCHARD'S RISE IN LIFE.

Began With 10 Cents and a Sandwich, but Is Now a Senator.

The youngest man in the United States senate is Jeter C. Pritchard of North Carolina, who very recently succeeded Mr. Jarvis, the man appointed by Governor Carr to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Senator Vance. Another unusual thing about this new North Carolina statesman is the fact that he is a Republican. He will without doubt remain a Republican, but in March he must resign to his colleagues elect the honor of being the youngest senator. Mr. Pritchard is 37 years of age, but Marion Butler, the recently elected Populist senator from North Carolina, is only 31, just one year beyond the constitutional limit for United States senators.



JETER C. PRITCHARD.

Senator Pritchard was born in Jonesboro, Tenn., July 12, 1857. His parents were poor, and at the age of 10 years he left home, with 10 cents and a chicken sandwich in his pocket, to seek his fortune. He walked from his home in Tennessee to Bakersville, N. C., receiving food and work at a country printing office and began the battle of life as a printer's devil. He identified himself with the Republican party, and in 1876, when but 19 years of age, made a number of speeches for Hayes and Wheeler. Two years later he again canvassed his county and was soon rewarded with an office in the revenue service.

In 1879 he removed to Marshall, N. C., and in the Garfield Hancock campaign was a subelector. In 1884 and 1886 he was elected to the lower house of the North Carolina legislature, and the heavy vote he polled demonstrated that he was one of the coming men in his party in the state. Deserting the newspaper business for the law, he was admitted to the bar in 1887 and was soon the fortunate possessor of a large and remunerative practice. In 1888 he ran for lieutenant governor, but was beaten. The recent successful fusion scheme in North Carolina was conceived by Marion Butler, it is said, and Pritchard was his foremost lieutenant. When the fusion ticket won, Butler took the long senatorial term, and Pritchard accepted the short term.

THE NEW FRENCH MINISTER.

Possession of a Brilliant American Wife One of His Qualifications For Office.

M. Ribot, the new premier of France, who succeeded in forming a cabinet after more distinguished statesmen had failed in the attempt, is chiefly interesting to readers on this side of the water as the husband of an American woman. Mme. Ribot is the daughter of Isaac H. Burch, a Chicago banker who has lived in Paris a good many years. There Miss Burch married M. Dominguez, a wealthy Parisian who died a few years later. After three years of widowhood Mme. Dominguez married M. Ribot, by whom she has had two children. She is now about 40 years of age, of charming personality and is very popular in the official society of the French capital.

M. RIBOT.

This is the second time Alexandre Felix Ribot has been prime minister of France. He first took the office in December, 1893, but remained in power only a few months. Prior to that he had been minister of foreign affairs in two cabinets, and it was while holding that portfolio that he requested President Harrison to recall a military attache of the United States legation in Paris whose conduct had been offensive to the French government. In 1887 M. Ribot visited the United States.

M. Ribot was born at St. Omer, Feb. 7, 1842. He was educated to the law and gained some distinction at the bar and was for several years a prosecutor in the department of justice. In 1878 he made his first appearance in parliament as a Republican and has been active in politics ever since. He twice refused cabinet portfolios before entering the ministry of M. de Freycinet in 1890.

M. Ribot is accounted a conservative and safe leader, and although not positively brilliant he is thoroughly versed in jurisprudence and understands industrial, commercial and financial questions. While not exactly popular in the ordinary sense of the word, he has no enemies—an enviable position in the present perturbed condition of French politics.

"WORKHOUSE NAN."

The Link That Held a Woman to a Better World.

She was serving her third or fourth sentence for being drunk and disorderly when I took an official position in the prison, and the sobriquet of "Workhouse Nan" had already been given her. When out of prison she lived no one knew where nor cared. She was a beggar, a drunkard and a brawler. When arrested, she had no friends. While a prisoner nothing good could be said about her. She gave the officials more trouble than any hundred women sent up for like offenses, and at the police court it was a relief to know that she was off the street and behind the bars again.

They tell you that a prison official becomes so hard hearted that he has no pity or sympathy for those under his charge. That may be true of some, but it is not of all. Many and many a time we discussed old Nan's case and wished we had it in our power to turn her from her evil ways. You had but to look at her when she was not in revolt to feel your sympathies go out toward her. She was an old woman, and in spite of her vicious career there still remained traces of that motherly look which can be found in wife and mother until their very souls are burned out by the flames of vice. Every one said she must have been beautiful as a girl and a bride, and as a wife and mother a woman to be proud of by any husband in the land. When she had been in prison for a fortnight or so, each time there would come a wonderful change. All the evil would go out of her face and be replaced by a mild complacency so befitting her gray hair that every visitor would stop in wonder that she should be a prisoner there. For a week she would be the most humble of prisoners, and then, use her as kindly as we would, there would come a revolt, and the inevitable result was the dark cell as a punishment.

Sometimes when old Nan was in her peaceful moods I would sit and talk with her. She would be respectful, but never communicative. Not one word could I ever get from her regarding her past life. That was a sealed book into which she herself did not dare to look. If she had relatives living, they had disowned her, or she was in hiding from them. No one pleaded for her when arrested. No one asked for her at the prison. She had but one favor to ask of police or prison officials. She carried in her bosom a small parcel wrapped in oiled silk. When searched, as all prisoners are, she begged to be allowed to retain the parcel, and, believing it to be some memento of other days no one ever took it from her. By and by we found out at the prison how to manage her. When she became obstinate, we threatened to take away the parcel, and the effect was wonderful. No other threat could move her, but that quieted her temper as soon as uttered.

The judge who sent old Nan to prison must have also felt to pity her, as he always gave her kind words even as he sent her back to us. Two or three times he offered to let her go free if she would leave the city or if friends would come forward and promise to take care of her. She would not go away, and she had no friends, and so it came about that within a week after serving out a sentence she would be sent back to begin on another. Each time that she came back we noticed the ravages of dissipation more plainly, and it took her longer to recover the look which we were eager to see. It was a terrible thing to watch a human life going down into the depths and to death that way, particularly a woman's life, but we could do nothing. One afternoon when old Nan had been coming and going for two years I stopped her in the corridor for a word or two, but passed on after a look without speaking. She no longer looked like a woman, hardly like a human being. Her face was swollen and blotched, her eyes red and bleary, and it was plain that she could not get much lower. She had just come back to us that day, and as I left her I knew that it was her last sentence and shuddered as I realized how she would look when death claimed her. Only the next morning the matron sent for me and led the way to old Nan's cell. I followed after, thinking she was ill, but when I stood in the open door I knew that she was dead. Death had come hours before, but she had made no outcry. When she felt the icy touch at her heart, she had taken the parcel and unwrapped it, and we found clutched in her cold fingers a frayed and faded and broken photograph—the picture of a boy 4 or 5 years of age. Secured to the card was a lock of brown hair, doubtless cut from the head of the child after death. Old Nan had died holding the relics of years agone. In the gloom of the corridor at midnight she could not have seen the face, but her fingers had touched the lock of hair, and her lips had kissed the card. And then there had come a wonderful change. All the wickedness and degradation had gone out of her soul, and as she wept the tears had purified her face until a sad, sweet smile rested on her mouth—until even through the glaze of death in the half open eyes one could read that she had prayed to God, and he had answered her that she might hope for mercy in the eternal beyond. No one removed those relics from her dead fingers. She held them as she was placed in her prison coffin—held them as the dirt was heaped above her prison grave. And we who had many times wondered if the years of degradation had eaten out her heart looked down upon her grave and whispered:

"In her last hour the relics gave her back what she had lost, and the angels will plead her cause in heaven."

M. QUAD.

Utopia and Chickens.

Sir Thomas More had a strong objection to sheep farms, declaring that the sheep ate up the people. Accordingly we find that on the utopian farms tillage was more particularly advanced, and that a great number of chickens were hatched, not in the natural way, but by means of a gentle equal heat, a prophetic vision of the incubator. Although husbandry was a science common to all alike, the people had each their proper handiwork, either cloth weaving, masonry, smithcraft or carpentering, for no others to speak of were known.

Sir Thomas held the theory that if all persons were made to work, including women and priests, there would be no need that any should labor more than six hours a day. In his sketch of a utopian day, however, no fewer than nine hours are allotted to work—six in the morning and three in the afternoon.

Two hours are allowed at midday for dinner and rest, one after supper for play and eight for sleep. The remainder of the day the people might spend as they pleased, though not in riot or sloth, but rather in the study of some branch of science, lectures being given early in the morning, that all might attend. One cannot but feel that the utopian Jack may have been rather a dull boy.—All the Year Round.

THE MAIDEN AND THE BURGLAR.

She was a maiden, coy, but forty,
Unsullied by a dream of man.
No thought, however slightly naughty,
Had ever crossed her life's short span

Till one dark night, when all were sleeping,
She found the wretch she long had sought,
For underneath her bed lay peeping
A poor, lone burglar freshly caught.

She locked the door, and, quickly turning,
Pulled forth a pistol fully cocked,
And with a voice that told its yearning
Her prisoner's plight she sternly mocked.

"Now, listen to my ultimatum:
You've got to marry me or die.
Though you're the very lowest stratum,
I'll have a husband or know why."

Then rose the burglar, sadly speaking:
"Your proposition does not suit.
Rather than be the man you are seeking,
Why, darn you, madam, darn you, shoot!"
—Youngstown Vindicator.

No Sort of a Place.

When the tall man slipped down on the ice in front of the drug store and lay there apparently in a faint, a crowd quickly gathered.

Everybody with advice on hand took it out and proffered it. Then a man ran hastily into the drug store, as hastily reappeared with a glass in his hand and kneeled down by the fallen stranger.

"What is it?" whispered the stranger, feebly lifting his head.

"Water," said the man with the glass.

The fallen stranger rose to his feet and stalked indignantly away.

"This is a one horse town anyway," he hissed between his set teeth—between his two sets of teeth, in fact.—Rockland Tribune.

THE EVENING STAR.

By the rapt ardor of my gaze
I sought to hold the evening star
Above the dark horizon bar,
Where, lamplike, swung its mellow blaze.

But toward the deepening glow it drew,
And nearer to the crimson belts
Wherein the amber afterglow melts,
Seeking for heavens fresh and new.

So sought I once to hold a soul,
Fair as the holy star of night,
Above the earth line, in my sight,
By force of Love's supreme control.

But glorywards it dipped and drew,
Nor staid for ardor of my gaze,
Passing from out our earthly ways
To those far heavens which are the new.
—Mrs. Merrill E. Gates in Youth's Companion.

A LOYAL HINDOO.

My servant Sajad was by no means an extraordinary fellow. I picked him up in Benares one scorching afternoon in midsummer. I was in want of a kitmutgar, and he seemed to have nothing to do. He could not speak one word of English, and, to tell the truth, that was the first and only recommendation upon which I engaged him.

In religion he was a Musselman, but he was far from being devout. Indeed I very soon rated him as rather below the average in everything. However, as I did not require anything remarkable, we got on well enough to the end, for he followed me, poor fellow, to his death.

Steal? Most decidedly. He would invariably steal anything belonging to me that attracted his fancy. If I discovered it and went about it in the right way, I could usually get it back.

Sajad never left me for an hour from the time he entered my service. He followed me all day and slept on a rug at my door or lay on the sand at my feet or just outside my tent at night, as the case might be, and he received just as many lectures on veracity and made just as many promises as the time allowed, but I am sure that he told me just as many lies the last week of his life as he did the first week he was with me. It is as much the nature of the oriental to lie and steal as it is of a dog to bark at a horse or of a cat to help herself to cream.

One who expects too much is apt to give credit for too little. That may be the reason the Hindoo has such a bad reputation in the minds of some who mean to be just, or even generous. Many a good turn Sajad did me right in the line of those two traits. It takes a rogue to catch a rogue, and I know that he saved me from being robbed by others many times over for all that he took himself, while he would detect a lie in what any one else told me as quickly as a negro boy in old Virgin' would spot a ripe watermelon.

We were marching through the Terai once with a small detachment. A soldier was leading my horse, while I walked upon one side of the path, followed at a little distance by Sajad, hunting for a bird I had shot and which had fallen in the tall grass. Suddenly there was a cry from those behind. I looked quickly over my shoulder. A hooded cobra, disturbed by the commotion I was making, had risen out of the grass just behind me. His flat head and flaring hood were already thrown back for a final fling at me. His half open mouth was within three feet of my face when my eyes rested upon it. If I turned, I should only expose more of my face. If I lifted a hand, he would strike it quicker than lightning. There was no chance to get away, and I was utterly helpless.

Before I had time to think a second thought, however, Sajad made one leap from where he was standing, and before his feet had touched the ground he had brought his staff about with a sharp whir as it cut the air, too quick even for a snake to dodge, and the next instant the cobra's body was writhing in the grass, while his head, completely severed, fell at my feet.

Had Sajad waited an instant he would have been too late. No one else could have reached me, yet if he had missed his aim or the snake had dodged his own life would have paid the forfeit. No one knew it better than Sajad, but he took the chance and saved my life. He had in his girdle at the time a bright colored silk handkerchief which he had stolen from me, and only that morning had solemnly declared that he knew nothing about it.

Up in the hills one afternoon I was lying on a low tent bed taking a nap, when Sajad saw a poisonous insect, a kind of scorpion, crawling over my pillow. He had nothing near to use as a weapon and no time to lose. He caught it in his naked hand and threw it out of the tent door. I woke in time to see it flying through the air, and hurrying out killed it before it got away.

I called to Sajad to ask if he had escaped a sting, and receiving a cheerful reply in the affirmative thought no more about it till, chancing to enter the tent softly and unexpectedly, I found him sucking the back of his right hand for dear life. He stopped the instant he saw me and put the hand behind him.

The poison had already begun to take effect. The hand and arm were swelling, and before long Sajad was lying on the floor writhing in agony. The only antidotes I had were ammonia and whisky. Sajad knew the contents of both bottles, for he had the care of all my traps. I did my best for him with the ammonia, but utterly in vain I pleaded, begged, commanded that he take the whisky. He would not touch it.

Why? Only because he was a Musselman. No matter how intense his agony or determined my command he put his well hand over his mouth and shook his head. He felt sure that he was dying, and he believed my assertion that the whisky might save him, but that made no difference. He came so near to death that he was past seeing anything and beyond hearing. He lay upon the ground, just breathing, panting, as though he was almost at the end. It seemed useless to try again, and yet, now that he was unconscious, I could at least make a last, desperate trial with the whisky. The moment that it touched his lips, he struggled away, clutched his lips with his hand and shook his head.

I believe the very fear that I should succeed in giving him the whisky kept him alive till the poison began to lose its power. At all events he did not die.

Sajad was as fond of hunting as I. Many a time we two slipped away from camp in the gray of early morning. Once, just before daylight, I was out with my shotgun in a thinly wooded jungle a mile from camp upon the shore of a small lake, waiting for birds.

It was just my luck. Because I came prepared for birds, there was not one in sight, but three beautiful antelope came down to drink within a hundred feet of us. I looked at the shotgun in disgust. Then looked again at the antelope. It was exasperating. I was determined to have a shot at any rate, and in the hope that I might stun one of them or at least bewilder him for an instant, I whispered to Sajad to be ready with his knife and make a dash the moment I fired.

Cautiously I raised the gun to my shoulder and was pressing the trigger, when Sajad touched me and whispered: "Wait, sahib! Look there!"

I looked, and my shotgun fell. At a slight angle, but little more than half way between us and the antelope, there crouched a royal Bengal tiger. A single glance was sufficient. He was surely a man eater. Evidently he had been on the point of satisfying his hunger with an antelope when he caught sight of us. He was within an easy leap of the deer, but was deliberately turning away and facing us. The motion startled the deer, and they bounded off, but the tiger paid them no further attention. The huge creature opened his great jaws till his head seemed nothing but a red, yawning gullet bordered by long, ragged, glistening teeth, and with a savage snarl he began to approach us.

There was no need of looking about for a place of safety. The jungle was sparsely wooded at the best, and the largest tree we had passed in coming from camp would not have borne even Sajad's weight 10 feet from the ground. Sajad had only his hunting knife, I nothing but my shotgun.

"One of us must go, sahib," Sajad muttered, without taking his eyes from the tiger. "If we run together, we shall both go. He will overtake us in a moment. Let Allah decide as it is written in our foreheads. Run that way for your life, sahib. I will run this way. Be quick, before he comes nearer!"

There was no time for thought. It seemed a fair proposition, and even as he spoke the Hindoo started at the top of his speed away. It was useless standing still or following him, and acting upon his suggestion I started in the opposite direction.

After running a rod or two I looked over my shoulder. The tiger had made a leap and was just landing, already crouched for another spring. He was following me!

I will not admit that I hoped he would follow Sajad, but I did hope that he would not choose me. It amounted to the same thing.

I started on for one more desperate struggle. I was doomed. I knew it perfectly well, yet while there is life there is hope, and I ran as I never ran before. I resolved to go as far as I could and then whirl about and give the tiger a charge of fine shot full in the face. It might put out his eyes. There was at least that possibility to hang a desperate hope upon, and throwing my gun to my shoulder I turned. The tiger was not there! Looking farther back, I saw his tawny hide in the underbrush. Instantly it rose. He was making a leap, but it was not toward me. One thrill of gratitude shot through my veins, when my heart stood still with horror. There was one sharp yelp as the huge form swept through the air, and crushing the leaves and branches as it fell landed upon the prostrate figure of Sajad, silently waiting for the blow.

I stood there petrified, the cold perspiration dripping from my forehead. There was not a sound from Sajad. There was only one fierce howl from the tiger; then all was still.

It was only an instant, but in that instant we two, my Hindoo servant and I, stood out before me in very bold relief. I had run for my life, knowing that the chances lay between us two and hoping at least that the tiger might not follow me. He had run, too, knowing that the chance lay between us, and because the tiger did not follow him he had come back again and tempted him—called him away from me and given his life for mine.

He was a poor benighted heathen and only an average sample of his kind. He could not help stealing pretty things. He could not stop telling lies. But surely he was a truer, braver, nobler man than I, and if the image of God can be found today in any of his creatures it would require no very deep theologian to decide which of us two betrayed it least profaned.—Henry Willard French in Romance.

The Straightest Line.

The straightest thing in nature or art is a ray of light when passing through a medium of uniform density. Hence the eye is enabled to test the straight lines of an edge or tube by holding it as nearly as possible coincident with a ray of light, such part as departs from straightness then intercepting the ray and causing a shade to be cast upon other parts. It is not known at what early period in the history of mankind the discovery was made that straightness could be thus determined. It is certain that thousands of mechanics use the method daily without being able to give a rational explanation of it. This primitive mode of testing straightness, on account of its great convenience and accuracy, is likely to continue in use to the end of the world.—Engineering Mechanics.

Warning to Expectant MOTHERS.
Many internal remedies are being skillfully and glibly advertised, purporting to Shorten Labor, Lessen Pains of Child-birth, etc., and [illegible]. Common sense should teach any woman that a preparation adapted for MENSTRUAL DISORDERS will not prepare the system for Child-birth; on the contrary, [illegible] imperil her life. We earnestly BEWARE of all such; they cannot, at this critical period, do any possible good, and their use may prove fatal. It is only by persistent EXTERNAL treatment while recumbent, relaxing and softening all the parts, that the body of Child-birth is robbed of its terrors, and no remedy on earth does this but "MOTHER'S FRIEND." MORRIS DEAD.

Superintendent of the Ohio Northern Twenty-two Years.

Henry Tressel Breaks an Arm and William Horn Has a Hand Mangled—Personal Gossip.

Superintendent J. S. Morris, of the Toledo division of the Pennsylvania system, died at his home in Toledo at 8:34 this morning. The deceased was a frequent visitor in this city, and the news of his death caused sorrow at Superintendent Law's office, when he was so well known. Mr. Morris was born at Troy, N. Y., May 7, 1838. He entered railroading April 1, 1857, on the eastern division of the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago road as a freight brakeman. Afterwards he served as freight and passenger conductor on the same division; then as yardmaster, trainmaster and later as freight and ticket agent at Mansfield, Ohio. May 1, 1873, he was appointed superintendent of the Toledo division, a position he filled up to the time of his death.

BROKE AN ARM

Henry Tressel, a car builder employed in the east car shops, fell yesterday and fractured the bones of his left arm near the wrist. Mr. Tressel is also a member of the Pennsylvania wreck crew and as such it is his duty to keep the foreman of the gang informed as to his whereabouts. Yesterday he was a pall bearer at a funeral, and started out to the east shops to report to his foreman and get permission to be absent, when he fell with the above result. He did not know his arm was broken until he called on Dr. McCausland, and that gentleman soon discovered the facts. Tressel will be laid up for several weeks.

LEFT HAND MANGLED.

William Horn, an operator of that dangerous piece of machinery called a shaper, had his left hand horribly mangled at 8.30 o'clock this morning. He was shaping washing machine lid batting at the factory of the Anthony Wayne works. One of the pieces of wood had a flaw in it, but it passed unnoticed by Mr. Horne until the stick broke and his hand was thrown into the wicked knife heads. The blades literally tore the ball of the thumb and the index finger into shreds. The injured man was taken to his boarding house on South Hanna street, where Dr. A. J. Kesler dressed the wounded hand.

MINOR MENTION.

Brakeman A. Becker, of the Nickel Plate, is sick.

Apprentice James Olive, jr., of the Wabash machine shop, is sick.

Boilermaker William Cherry has recovered from a severe attack of the grip.

James Donahue, office boy in the Pittsburg paint shops, is sick and off duty.

A. Kummer, machinist at the Pittsburg shops, is off duty on account of sickness.

General Ticket and Freight Agent J. H. Russell, of the Findlay, is in the city today.

A viaduct 1,200 feet long will be built by the Pennsylvania company over its yards at Alliance, Ohio.

Sickness in the family of Wallace Kendall keeps that gentleman from his duties in the electric works.

Machinist L. R. Bookwalter resumed work at the Pittsburg shops this morning after a few days' illness.

Machinist William Reidt returned to his duties in the Bass works this morning after an illness of two weeks.

H. D Granger, chief clerk, and Miss Ada Eyhouser, stenographer, of the Wabash master mechanic's office, were unable to report for duty this morning on account of sickness.

Louis Hibbler, of the Pittsburg blacksmith shop, has moved his family into the house at No. 48 Grand street.

Several eastern lines are employing detectives at Chicago and St. Louis to test the market for cut-rate tickets.

Master Car Builder James A. Graham has gone to Altoona, Pa., on business for the Pennsylvania company.

General Manager R. T. McDonald and his private secretary, C. C. Gould, arrived home from New York yesterday.

S. W. Richards, night watchman at the electric light works, who had been sick for a month, resumed work last night.

Judson Wood, general foreman of the Standard wheel works, is entertaining his brother, J. I. Woods, of Ogontee, Ind.

The Wabash lines earned in the first week of February $169,295, a decrease as compared with the same week of 1894 of $25,250.

Jerry Stanford, tank builder at the Pittsburg shops, has recovered from his recent illness and reported for duty this morning.

C. H. Bowman, painter in the Pittsburg shops, and his wife went to Chicago this morning to spend a day or two with friends.

J. Moore, of the lumber yards, and August Dornte, of the planing mills, Pittsburg shops, are off duty on account of sickness.

Theodore Dobler resumed his position at the desk in the office of the Pittsburg round house this morning, after a week's illness.

Last week there were repaired and turned out of the Pittsburg shops engines 70, 89, 206 and 209, and taken in for repairs, engine 148.

After six weeks of idleness on account of an injured hand, W. E. Sheefer has resumed his old place in the Pittsburg planing mills.

C. F. Scott has gone to Knox, Ind., in response to a telegram stating that his mother had died there. Scott is a Nickel Plate brakeman.

Master Mechanic J. H. Bedson, of the Nickel Plate, who was off duty last week on account of injuries sustained by a fall, is working again.

Pittsburg trainmen who are sick and off duty: Engineer William Torgee, Fireman W. Rhoads, A. D. Hunter, J. Doetcher, S. Lott and C. H. Piott.

Nickel Plate Firemen Longsworth and Blackburn have resumed their duties on the road after being off a week each on account of sickness.

A new transfer table for handling locomotives is in course of erection at the Pittsburg shops, to replace the one which has been in use many years.

Blacksmith John O'Connor, who had an ankle broken a few weeks ago, is still badly crippled, but he is able to get around with the aid of a crutch.

The electric works this morning shipped the machinery for an 800 light plant, incandescent system, to Milwaukee, and for a sixty-light system to East St. Louis.

Master Mechanic Delaney, of the Monon lines, expects to remove his headquarters from New Albany to Lafayette on the completion of the new shops at the latter city, which will be about June 1.

H. F. Bicknell has resigned as assistant passenger trainmaster of the Pennsylvania lines at Pittsburg to accept a position of superintendent of the Lake Erie and Western, with headquarters at Lima, O.

Foreman Charles Knothe, of the electric works, is off duty on account of the death of his father, Julius Knothe, notice of which appears elsewhere. Christian Cook is looking after Mr Knothe's department of the works.

Ed Tierney, Henry Sloat, Charles W. Hall and Charlie Nolan have returned to work in the Pittsburg machine shop. The two former were off on account of injuries and the latter were sick.

William Yergens, foreman of the erecting department of the Wabash shops, left at noon today for Kansas City, where he will visit his sister and recuperate his health. He has been quite sick for several weeks.

A portion of the force in the foundry department of the electric works were compelled to work all Saturday night in order to complete some work that was to be sent to Cleveland, where an electrical convention will be held tomorrow.

A movement is under way to compel the Pennsylvania Railroad company to replace the famous stone bridge, at Johnstown, with other structures. Councils have ordered the city solicitor to investigate the question, and report at once.

The Pittsburg paymaster remained over Sunday in this city, his train leaving for the west at 7.30 o'clock this morning, in charge of Conductor Len Featy. The car was hauled by engine 218, with Engineer Michael Shea at the throttle.

The fact that the Lake Shore company has reinstated some of the trainmen who were let out during the strike last summer has revived the hope in the breast of the ex employes on the Nickel Plate that they, too, would be reinstated.

The Railway Age is of the opinion that car building is on the increase and the year 1895 will produce many more cars than the year 1894. Already there have been built 2,040 cars, over one-half as many as were built during the entire year of 1894.

Mrs. Matt Baches and daughter Anna arrived in the city last Saturday and will be the guest of friends a week. Mr. Baches will join them here in a few days. He is foreman of the Pennsylvania company's boiler shops at Wellsville, Ohio.

Owing to a disagreement of the parties in interest the attempt to consolidate under one management the private stock car companies doing business in the United States was not successful. The negotiations have been declared off for the present.

This morning Foreman P. J. Schird turned over the Pittsburg round house to his assistant Frank Fay, and started out upon a tour of the southwestern branch of the Pennsylvania system in the interest of the company. He will be absent several days.

Saturday night the Jolly Five club gave a masquerade ball at their hall in Frenchtown. There were twenty couples present and all enjoyed the occasion very much. The event was in celebration of the twenty-second birthday of one of the club members.

Stewart Rehrer returned today from Texas, where he has been spending several weeks in the interest of the electric light works. Tonight Mr. Rehrer and J. D. White, of the Pittsburg shops, will be given the first degree in Odd Fellowship by Fort Wayne lodge No 14.

A special train bearing a party of students to Columbia City to attend the funeral of Edward Lowill ran over the Pittsburg road yesterday, leaving here at 12:30 and returning at 5:30. Conductor Cliff Ellenwood had charge of the train and Engineer C. J. Pearson was at the throttle.

Henry Dryer, H. H. Robinson, Martin Crawford and Charles Robinson, of the Pittsburg blacksmith shop, are on the sick list. Terrence Martin, John Deegan, Jerry Connors, Patrick O'Brien and J. C. Chamberlain, of the same shop, who were off duty last week, reported this morning.

On and after February 25 the Wabash will accept mileage in payment of seats in parlor cars, meals in dining cars, lunches in cafe or buffet cars or excess baggage. An announcement to that effect has been made by General Passenger Agent Crane, and is a sweeping concession to holders of mileage books.

The Huntington papers are authority for the statement that Capt. F. F. Boltz, formerly of this city, has been offered and has accepted the position of station agent at Bluffton for the Lake Erie and Western road. Mr. Boltz recently disposed of his interest in the manufacturing establishment of Briant & Boltz, at Huntington.

The citizens of Benton Harbor are considerably disturbed over the agitation of the Big Four making Muskegon its northern lake terminal instead of Benton Harbor. A survey of the proposed line from Benton Harbor to Muskegon has already been made, the line touching Allegan and passing through Ottawa county.

Nickel Plate engines 21 and 159 came out of the Stony Island shops Saturday looking like new locomotives. No. 159 will haul passenger trains Nos. 4 and 5 between this city and Chicago and will be in charge of Engineers Miller and Moore. No. 21 will go into the through freight service, running between this city and Bellevue, with Engineer Ogier at the throttle.

Joseph Slater has returned from a business trip to Ohio in the interest of the Bass works. He was quite successful in securing orders, getting one from the Globe Iron works, Cleveland, Ohio, for twenty-two large forgings for steamships. Another big order came from Grand Rapids and called for fifty-seven large engine cranks, for the Vapor Engine and Power company.

The Pennsylvania company is preparing to equip some of its eastern connecting and short lines with the trolley system, discarding steam only for freight purposes. The Burlington branch of the Auburn division is being thus equipped. This branch connects Burlington and Mount Holy, N. J., and is between seven and eight miles in length. Should the experiment prove successful, other branches of the Pennsylvania will be operated by electricity instead of steam. The intention is to give a frequent service at high speed.

George Campbell was out on the streets Saturday afternoon for the first time in seventeen weeks. His emaciated form and unsteady step are evidence of the terrible struggle with typhoid fever he has passed through. He was near the portals of death, but a strong constitution and good nursing conquered and he will soon be at work again. George is rate clerk at the Lake Shore office.

Vestibule trains seem to be growing in use in Germany, and the work of equipping the cars of express trains on the Prussian State railroads with vestibules is being carried on. Twenty vestibule trains are now in service and twenty-eight are to be added as rapidly as practicable. The trains are operated on the parlor car system, that is to say, with numbered seats for which special tickets are issued and a higher rate of fare is charged.

Last Friday night Chief Train Dispatcher Will Tiger, of the Pittsburg, attended a meeting of the Royal Arcanum at Richmond, Ind., and officiated at the presentation of the prize jewel earned by the council for making the largest increase in membership in 1894. Mr. Tiger is grand regent of the order. Concerning the presentation the Richmond Palladium says: "The jewel was presented to T. A. Mott, past regent, in an appropriate manner, the address of Mr. Tiger being especially fine. It is a crown with star pendant and set with three beautiful stones. At 10 o'clock a banquet was served by Caterer Davis. The evening was a pleasant one."

ABSOLUTELY PURE

CARD OF THANKS

The undersigned hereby wish to express their sincere thanks to all friends and neighbors who solaced us greatly by their kindness in our late sad bereavement; most especially do we wish to thank my late husband's comrades from the shop for the way they expressed their friendship toward him. We also wish to express our gratitude to the Maennerchor Eintracht for the beautiful song they sang for the solace at my late beloved husband's funeral.

LINCOLN'S SISTER-IN-LAW.

Mrs. Emily Todd Helm's Hard Fight For a Kentucky Postoffice.

Kentucky has two women postmasters, both of whom are related to President Lincoln by marriage. They are Mrs. Emily Todd Helm, postmaster of Elizabethtown, and Miss Mary Todd, postmaster of Cynthiana. Mrs. Helm is a younger sister of Mrs. Lincoln, and Miss Todd is a namesake and niece of the war president's wife.

Mrs. Helm is attracting considerable attention just now because she is one of the most interested parties in a contest for the possession of the Elizabethtown postoffice. She has been postmaster for three presidential terms, but not long ago Congressman Montgomery procured the appointment of Frank W. Joplin as her successor. The act aroused the friends of Mrs. Helm, and they are doing all they can to prevent the confirmation of the nomination. The ex-Confederates in the senate are supporting her because many of them knew and admired her husband, gallant General Benjamin Hardin Helm, who fell at Chickamauga while leading his famous "Orphan Brigade," so called because of the number of officers it lost in battle.

MRS. EMILY TODD HELM

Senator Joe Blackburn was fighting not far away when Helm was killed, and he feels a certain sense of obligation to protect his old comrade's wife. The appointment has been hung up in the senate with the aid of ex-Confederate senators and a number of Republicans who remember that Mrs. Helm was a sister of Lincoln's wife, and Senator Blackburn vows that it shall never be confirmed. Montgomery is a Democrat, and as a Republican has been elected to succeed him the Kentucky senators will, by long established custom, have the nomination of the Elizabethtown postmaster at the next session. If Joplin's nomination is not confirmed at this session, the Kentucky senators, it is said, will urge Mrs. Helm's claims. Meanwhile she will continue in office until the appointment of her successor is confirmed by the senate.

When the war began President Lincoln did all he could to induce Helm to side with the Union, but in vain. When Helm fell at Chickamauga, Lincoln sent a pass to Mrs. Helm, who passed through the lines and was for several weeks a guest at the White House.

Posed.

"Darling, I love you."

The marquis stood with bowed head.

"But," she protested shyly, "you have a noble name, while I have only my health and $25,000,000."

"Love levels all ranks," he whispered.

Moreover, when they came to discuss details, it was discovered that her family, for five generations, could trace [illegible] It was [illegible] of indefeasible [illegible] and which, in some respects, had over anything of which his long line could boast, either in direct descent or collateral branches.—Detroit Tribune.

False Alarm.

Mr. McSwat went home late from a club dinner the other night, and in his haste he forgot to remove his gloves when he went to bed. About 3 o'clock a. m. he aroused Mrs. McSwat with the agonizing cry:

"Lobelia! Lobelia! I believe on my soul I'm getting paralyzed! There isn't a bit of feeling in my hands!"—Chicago Tribune.

Students of economical housekeeping will be interested to know that the expenses of the queen of England's household last year amounted to $865,000, three-quarters of which was salaries.

I was afflicted with catarrh last autumn. During the month of October I could neither taste or smell and hear but little. Ely's Cream Balm cured it.—Marcus Geo. Shautz, Rahway, N. J.

I suffered from catarrh of the worst kind ever since a boy, and I never hoped for cure, but Ely's Cream Balm seems to do even that. Many acquaintances have used it with excellent results.—Oscar Ostrum, 45 Warren Ave., Chicago, Ill. Cream Balm is agreeable.

The highly talented composer and leader, also director of the famous Chautauqua School of Music, Prof. W. F. Sherwin, commends the World's Sweetest Songs in substance as follows: "They are a most charming collection for the home circle. The selections show fine taste and excellent judgment, while the variety is wonderful, stretching away from the simple Cradle Song to Haydn's Aria "With Verdure Clad." They will bring genial sunshine and refinement to the home." tf

A number of business men met Saturday evening in the parlors of the Wayne for the purpose of forming a business organization to advance the interests of Fort Wayne. Those who had signed the agreement, circulated by Mr. M Fay, were declared charter members The Hon Charles F. Muhler was unanimously chosen president and Mr Fay secretary. A committee consisting of Louis Fox, D N. Foster and Herman Freiberger were appointed to confer with the officers of the Wayne club to see if some arrangements could be made for the use of the club house as a place of meeting. Messrs. A E Hoffman, A. F. Glutting and S. M. Foster were appointed a committee to prepare suitable bylaws. The meeting then adjourned to meet at the same place one week from tonight.

The ticket sale for the First Regiment band concert at the Temple tomorrow night has been large and a good house is assured. There are, however, still plenty of choice seats left and as a uniform rate of fifty cents for admission has been established there is no doubt that the house will be filled. The solo numbers will be appreciated by all lovers of music, and the variety of the programme and its popular character will insure its hearty reception by all. The center of interest is, of course, in Mrs Carrie B. Johnson, the celebrated piano virtuoso, who will fill three numbers The Cincinnati Post, in a recent criticism, said: "In Mrs Johnson's talent is found many excellencies, especially those which lean toward the side of refinement and delicate sparkle. Her touch is exquisite, being firm without roughness and tender without effeminacy. In the concerted works where a deeper intelligence is demanded and where the mind of the performer must follow a more intricate pattern, her treatment of the works is thoroughly satisfactory."

Next Wednesday afternoon will occur the marriage of Mr. F. H. Baade, the well known ice dealer, to Miss Louise Stalhut, daughter of the ex-policeman. They will reside at 7 Huestis avenue

A very pleasant surprise was given at the home of Miss Clara Trader Saturday evening in honor of her birthday anniversary. Dancing and cards were enjoyed until midnight, when supper was served.

Friday evening Misses Carrie Hughes and Mary McDonald delightfully entertained guests at Miss Hughes' home on West Berry street. Among the guests were Misses Ethel and Margie Hanna, Julia Smyser, Jessie Sale, Messrs Charles Lang, Charles Falls, Fred Gregg, Alfred Gussler, Walter Crim, Ronald Furman.

Saturday evening, at a marsh mellow bake and progressive games, Miss Alice Dryer, in a very delightful manner, entertained a few friends at her home, in South Wayne. The guests were Misses Bertha Jackson, Clara Dryer, Jeanette Humphrey, Marion Hartman, Mary Meyers, of Decatur; Grace Harding, DeEtta Davis, Daisy Davis, Messrs. Joe Bursley, Ralph Lane, Perry and Charles Olds, Dan Hayden, Fred McCracken, Rex Dryer.

The Missionary club will meet in the parlors of the First Presbyterian church next Thursday evening. The club is entering upon its third year. Unlike missionary societies, it devotes itself exclusively to the dissemination of knowledge upon the subject of missions, and is, therefore, strictly speaking, a reading club. The Rev. S. C Dickey, of Indianapolis will present to the club next Thursday the plans of the "Winona Assembly and Summer School," which will open to the public at Bass Lake, Ind., this coming summer.

A new substitute for crinoline is an English one It consists of a silk petticoat, lined throughout with soft chamois, and has a deep yoke on the front and sides, with deep organ plaits in the back and a fluted flounce at the lower edge of the yoke. It is called "The Elizabethan Petticoat," and anything more suggestive of crinoline proper than the title and appearance of the skirt could not possibly be furnished.

Miss Sophia Schmidt, of 276 South Hanna street, will leave this evening for Lima, Ohio, to spend a few days with relatives.

Mrs. M Meriam, of 56 Division street, has returned from Hoagland, Ind., where she spent several days with her father and sisters.

At 9 o'clock next Thursday morning Mr. Martin Rhinehart and Miss Gertrude Franke will be married at St. Peter's Catholic church. The bride and groom will leave on the noon train on the Grand Rapids road for Cincinnati and other cities, expecting to be absent about two weeks.

Last evening Mr Frank H. Gocke at his home, 325 East Wayne street, was pleasantly entertained at progressive pedro. The first prizes were won by Messrs. Frank Gocke and Andy Gruber and the consolation prizes were awarded to Miss Lizzie Wellman and Sylvester Gocke. At 11 o'clock a dainty three course luncheon was served. Those present were: Misses Minnie Nussbaum, Lizzie Wellman, Laura Schuckman, Eva Lauer, Carrie Scharf, Francis Gocke and Mrs Scharf; Messrs. Frank Gocke, Ed. Seabold, Andy Gruber, John Nussbaum, Henry Bradtmiller, Clemens Gocke, Silvester Gocke and Mr. and Mrs. Gocke.

WESTMINSTER NOTES.

Miss Jean Fildes is entertaining her sister, Miss Edith, over Sunday.

Miss Allie Ballinger took dinner one evening with her friend, Miss Emma Buchman.

St. Valentine did, however, show his smiling face, leaving faces even more smiling after his departure.

Several birthdays have been celebrated, as the frequent presence of carnations on the dinner table evidenced.

Miss Jennie Stahl is enjoying a visit from her mother, Mrs. A. J. Stahl of LaPorte. Mrs. Stahl came with the benevolent intention of giving all the girls a sleigh ride, but finds one thing lacking—the snow.

The profound devotion of boarding school girls to Mr. Lincoln and their intense desire to celebrate his birthday proves that our country is safe so far as its daughters are concerned. And they are equally attached to the "Father of His Country"

Westminster was well represented at the Wallace Bruce lecture, last week The Senior class, chaperoned by Miss Lewis, and the Middlers, by Miss Durgin, wearing "the blue and the gold," attended, together with others of the teachers and pupils.

Friday evening was teachers' night. They received in the parlors at 7:30 Guests from outside the family were Mrs. Stahl and Miss Edith Fildes, of Laporte; Misses Ethel Pierce, Helen and Mary Knight, Clara Paul, Clara Carnahan, Gertrude Hanna and Isabelle McClure, and Misses Moellier and Molboe. "Progressive Peanuts" furnised the amusement of the evening. a game developing calm nerves, a sure eye and a steady hand. At the close of ten games, Miss Harriet Dills could show the greatest number of peanuts in her bag, and received a copy of the ever fresh Vicar of Wakefield, while Miss Pearl Kelley was consoled for the lack of peanuts in the quantity by a beautiful brown peanut Chinese mandarin, who will dangle from her gas jet as a reminder of a pleasant evening Ices and cakes relieved heated imaginations and feverish brows and restored to tranquility the unhappy many who longed for

"One little peanut,
Just one little peanut more."

The trainload of provisions sent from the south to the farmers of Nebraska was a messenger proclaiming the mild climate and abundant production of the fair south. The result is that thousands of the farmers who were burned out by drought last summer are already preparing to migrate southward when the spring opens. We always knew those Atlanta people were as shrewd as they are handsome. The world has been giving them credit, as it should do, for their benevolence in starting the relief movement in the south for Nebraska farmers. All the while they have been chuckling to themselves and quietly waiting for the very news which now comes—that northwestern farmers are meditating an exodus southward. It is certain that the closing days of the nineteenth century will see a marvelous increase in population and wealth in the south Nature has done everything for that locality.

"The powers" are, very ready with their ultimatum to Japan about what she shall not do to China. They hope, "the powers" do, that the United States will join them in their say. The principal point in their dictum is that Japan shall not be allowed to annex an inch of Chinese mainland. What is it the blessed business of the powers anyhow? They have not done any of the fighting and have not furnished a dollar or a man to win the victory. China would be better off today and so would all the rest of the world if she were handed over body and bones to Japan. In some respects Japan is a more civilized country than England herself.

The United States has been drained of $250,000,000 in gold in one year. It went to Europe.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT!

All thoughtful housewives know that the cooking apparatus is the most important article that contributes to the comfort of a well regulated home. No article of this kind that has ever been placed before the public has received such universal endorsement as

THE STEEL RANGE MAJESTIC

The most prominent stove merchants in the United States who have given a lifetime of study and observation to the subject of cooking apparatus unite in saying that the Steel Range Majestic is the best constructed, the most economical in the use of fuel, the most perfect and satisfactory in its operation of any stove or range that has come within their notice. Besides this, more than one hundred thousand housewives unite in saying that it is so far superior to other cook stoves and ranges that they have used that their cooking by its use is made a positive pleasure

DURING THE COOKING EXHIBIT in our stores we make the special manufacturers' price to our patrons and we advise them to buy now. Call in when you are down town and see the range and enjoy the Majestic biscuits and coffee.
